A SONG.

Ah, what is better than this, my dear,
What is better than this?
The thought of a night which has lost its way
Between tomorrow and yesterday;
The full of the tide and the gray of the sea,
And a gull that circleth endlessly;
The breath from a wind which bloweth well;
A sail that hasteth new ports to tell;
If aught is better than this, my dear,
I find it not here, I find it not here.
—Blanche Trask in "The Land of Sunshine."

JUST A CURTAIN FIRE.

It Was In a Girls' Boarding School and Did Complicated Damage.

A fire in a skyscraper may be thrilling, but for dramatic episodes and unexpected complications a fire in a girls' boarding school surpasses it. The boarding school fire is usually what is known among insurance men as a curtain fire, but a curtain fire in a girls' school is more exciting and causes more casualties than an ordinary blaze anywhere else.

One evening last week two girls, who occupy a microscopic hall bedroom in a swell up town school, took the globes off the gas fixtures for hair curling purposes and left them off, because it was easier to do that than to put them on again. Then the girls raised the window a trifle in order to cool the room and dutifully sat down to write home letters. The inevitable happened, and when girl number one poised her pen in the air and glanced around the room in search of inspiration she saw the curtains in a blaze. She screamed. Girl number two looked around and echoed the scream. Then, with promptitude and discretion, both girls fainted. The screams had attracted the attention of the other girls, who rushed to the scene and then did various and sundry stunts, according to their several dispositions. One fainted, several wept, a few ran out of the house, and the rest shouted for the one man on the premises.

When he arrived, things looked rather hopeless. Curtains and woodwork were blazing finely. The floor was littered with prostrate forms, and when three girls have fainted on the floor of a hall bedroom there isn't much space in the room for promenading. The man picked his way across the prostrate forms and ordered all the girls who were not in a dead faint to leave the room, but they didn't go until he lost his temper and spoke with a force which isn't common in boarding school circles. Then they fled; but, unluckily, there was an enemy in the rear. A vigorous and practical woman from Texas had been inspired to go after some water. Returning in mad haste with a large pitcherful of water borne triumphantly aloft, she collided with the retreating forces at the door. The pitcher struck the leader of the retreat squarely in the face and knocked out two of her front teeth, whereupon the injured girl made the fainting trio a quartet and the water carrier dropped her pitcher and went into violent hysterics.

Hysteria, as boarding school teachers know to their sorrow, is contagious, and the one case touched off the crowd. By the time teachers arrived upon the scene the fire was out, but the survivors were in a bad way. It was necessary to put nine-tenths of the school to bed and order wholesale doses of bromide. Even now the girls insist that they haven't recovered from the shock sufficiently to do hard studying, and the victims of the water pitcher are both under the care of trained nurses. As for the man, he gave up his place the next day and confided to the cook that he was going to look for a job in a lunatic asylum, where his boarding school experience would be of value to him.—New York Sun.

A Useless Wish.

"Oh," sighed the poetic lady, "had I the wings of a bird!"

"Don't!" protested her husband. "Don't wish for the wings of a bird. If you had them, some other woman would probably be wearing them on her hat before the season is over."—Washington Star.

THE LOVE SIGN OF THE ROSE.

She trained a little rose to grow
And grace the gate above,
And hence I love the pathway so
That leads me to her love.
And oft my heart before me goes
To read the love sign of the rose.

Though fairer bloom for lovers' tryst,
To me it seems as fair
As if an angel's lips had kissed
And blessed it, blooming there.
For heaven its sweetest smile bestows
On the dear love sign of the rose.

The pattering of little feet,
When shadows blur the light,
And rosy twining arms that meet
And necklace me at night—
These my glad heart enraptured knows
At the dear love sign of the rose.

Not far away love's steps shall stray
In thorny paths to roam,
While o'er the meadows of life's May
Shine signals sweet of home.
When night falls drear, one heart still knows
Rest at the love sign of the rose.

MIRIAM'S DREAM.

"You won't really go at this time of the year, will you?"

"Rather. I'd go in December if Dick were at the end of the journey."

"Well, I would not cross the Atlantic in the middle of November for a dozen sweethearts."

Miriam laughed gleefully. She and her Dick had been separated for three years, and now he had fallen into a good berth at Toronto and had written to her to decide whether they should both spend their winter in loneliness or whether she would go to him and settle down at once as his wife.

Miriam did not hesitate a moment. She set aside the shortest time possible for winding up her affairs in England and arranged to sail in the Sivonian from Liverpool to Halifax.

"But you'll have a dreadful overland journey after that. It must be a long way to Toronto," said her friend Nora. "I don't know how you'll get through all by yourself."

"Ah, but I'm not going to. Dick has been sent by his firm to New York on some business, and he intends to take a berth in the Meldrum, a coasting steamer, which will bring him to Halifax about the same time that I get there."

Miriam was in a fever of joy and was altogether oblivious of such small matters as intense cold, a pitching, rolling ship and battened down hatches. The good ship fought gayly through a stormy, ice threatened sea, and at last a morning broke when the sun shone fair and the waves sank into a comparative calm. Passengers swarmed on deck, congratulating each other on their escape from prison, and the anxious captain sighed with relief to think that the worst was over. He was upon his bridge, stamping up and down to keep the blood circulating in his feet, when ahead of them he saw a strange speck dancing on the waves.

As he drew nearer he found it an apparently empty boat, and he sent off one of his boats to tow the stranger to the steamer. When it reached the side, however, the limp form of a sailor was lifted from it. Under care and good treatment the blood began to run again through his stiff veins, and he was able to tell what had befallen him. But before that happened his boat had been landed on deck, and the name upon it—Meldrum—made known.

"How funny!" cried Miriam. "A steamer sailing from New York to Halifax is named Meldrum."

"Aye, missie," said a sailor ominously, "and this is one of her boats."

"But how can it be? How could it have got loose out here?"

"If that poor chap lives he can tell us that, and no one else perhaps."

After some time the sailor's words began to beat into Miriam's stupefied brain. She tried to speak to some one standing near, but her tongue would not move, only her knees shook so much that she nearly fell. Her neighbor drew her to a seat.

"Is the Meldrum wrecked?" Miriam asked, with tragic eyes.

"I do not know, but I hope not. That poor fellow will tell us, if he lives."

That evening it was known that the Meldrum had collided with another vessel in the storm, and that, although all the boats had been lowered, they had one after another been swamped. The rescued sailor had just jumped into one when its ropes snapped, and he was therefore the only person saved.

The stewardess took the tidings with a cup of tea to Miriam as she lay inert and despairing on her sofa, and she let the woman gossip out her news without uttering a sound. At last the stewardess went away, and Miriam lay still, not thinking, only suffering.

Later she crawled into her bed, where, through the night, visions of Dick, as a boy, as a youth, as a man, rushed through her mind. Sometimes she saw his face shining through the darkness, but when she clasped him round the neck he was cold as ice and wet with salt water.

Then she was out on the upper deck and not alone. By her side stood some one—a huge man, a giant, who seemed to reach to the sky. His clothes changed their color from light to dark, from black to brown. His great body undulated all the time, and when he put his arm round her he seemed to be surrounded with a dry, suffocating warmth. Then he pointed a long arm to the northeast, and seemed to slip farther and farther away, though he still stood by her side; the monster lengthened into miles; Miriam followed him with straining eyes, when a flash of lightning lit up the sky and sea. It played for a moment round a distant spot, which the giant was touching, and in that moment she saw a picture which she never forgot.

In the little circle of light a boat rocked helplessly upon the waters. Under a sail were crouched some dozen people, trying, by huddling together, to keep the warmth in their bodies. She knew that Dick was there, and called his name shrilly. There was a sudden movement in the human heap, a white face peeped out, and then the vision passed.

Miriam lay in her berth, the new dawn already lightening the sky. Then feverishly she got up and went on deck, to see nothing but the gray sky and grayer sea, to hear nothing but the throbbing of the engines and the sough of the wind and waves. Breakfast time came, but she heeded it not. For hours she stood immovable, gazing to the northeast over the bulwarks. What did that dream of hers mean? Was Dick floating somewhere helplessly, with other passengers?

It was noon when the wind, veering, sent a cloud of smoke over her head and a shower of black smudges upon her hands. With them came a passing sensation of warmth. This slight incident awoke some vague memory connected with her dream. The black column of smoke, changing at its edges to brown, thinning out until she could see the gray sky through it, starting ever from her side and yet reaching far into the distance, caught her eye.

Inspiration followed quickly. The smoke was the giant of the night before, and where it pointed lay Dick and his companions! Sight danced into her eyes, hope beat strongly in her heart. She turned a glorified face to the ship. What could she do? How save them?

She saw a foot surmounted by blue cloth moving methodically on the deck above, and in a moment flew up the stairs leading to the captain's bridge. The captain turned round sharply at the sound of strange footsteps, and peremptorily ordered her down. Clutching his arm she cried:

"Captain! They are out there, under the line of smoke! A dozen survivors of the Meldrum are drifting helplessly and nearly dead!"

The captain glanced in the direction indicated. How should this frantic young woman have seen what his practised eye could not discern? Then he guessed that she was the person who, they said, had lost her lover in the wreck.

"My dear," he cried, patting her hand, "go to your berth and lie down. You are in great trouble."

But the haggard, hopeful eyes stared brightly at him.

"For the love of humanity, captain, use your glass. You will see them. I know you will."

To humor her he took a careful survey of the horizon, upon which the sun was shining. At first he shook his head, then he stood for a long time examining the spot under the thin edge of the line of smoke. He rubbed his glasses well and looked again, then said quietly:

"Something is there. Sit down in that corner and wait."

The course of the steamer was altered slightly and a boat was lowered once more to gather in the ocean's drift. To his surprise the captain saw that the distant object was really a boat, without sail or oar. How could the girl have known it? Then the group of people became visible, all evidently in the last stage of exhaustion, and he went over to Miriam and told her to look through his glass and see if her friend were there.

She took it from his hand with a wild sob and gazed long and steadily at the coming boat, then gave the glass back in the midst of a passion of weeping, nodding her head to signify that she had seen Dick. Then she set herself to regain self control by the time the boat came in. When it did, she was waiting in the hospital for her beloved.

For the next 24 hours she shared the duties of nurse with one of the stewardesses and saw Dick's eyes open with the first gleam of consciousness in them. With a contented look at her he fell asleep, and on the ship's arrival at Halifax he with all those who had been saved were well enough to be moved to more comfortable quarters on shore.

The captain made friends with Miriam during those few hours and learned how it was that she knew the boat was afloat. He could hardly believe it, and he could not explain it, but was contented to accept the fact as it stood and to be present at the simple ceremony which made Dick and Miriam man and wife.—Buffalo News.

A Man of Straw.

From time immemorial straw, probably because of its inseparable connection with bread, the staff of life, has had a more or less sacred significance. Our Aryan forefathers strewed their altars with it and swore on it as we swear on the Bible. It is easy to understand how this practice would lead to the stalk of corn being used as the symbol of a binding contract. For instance, the Latin for a stalk is stipulatio, whence naturally comes "stipulation."

In mediæval times the presentation of a stalk of corn was a sign of service and faith. So, too, at hiring fairs in later times servants wishing to be hired carried a straw in their mouths. And in the days when unscrupulous persons deliberately hired themselves out to litigants to give any evidence that was wanted, they wore straws in their shoes, from which custom we have the saying "man of straw"—a person of no material or moral worth. The horse with straw plaited in his mane and tail is perhaps the last surviving instance of the significance of straw as implying or binding a contract.

Oil For the Skin.

The men and women of ancient Greece and the famous beauties of every clime always understood the use of oil in the toilet, says an authority, which gives the following hint: When animal oil is used, it clogs up the pores and renders the skin coarse, but vegetable oils, such as the Greeks used, feed the skin. There are many skins that do not need lubrication after a bath, but there are many others which are benefited by the use of fine vegetable oil, such as almond cream, which furnishes food to the skin and is a powerful aid in the fight against wrinkles.—Exchange.

THE POWER OF WILL.

He Wanted to Live Four Days, and He Succeeded.

It would be vain to attempt to describe the sympathy for the poor and suffering which William Stokes could throw into his voice, says his biographer. One of the stories he used to tell is of peculiar interest, not only for its revelation of human kindness, but as a proof of the power of the will in prolonging life.

An old pensioner was a patient of Stokes in the Meath hospital. His life was despaired of, and, in fact, his death was hourly expected. One morning, having many patients to care for and believing that the pensioner was unconscious and past help, Dr. Stokes passed his bed without stopping. The patient was greatly distressed and cried out:

"Don't pass me by, docther; you must keep me alive for four days."

"We will keep you as long as we can, my poor fellow," answered Stokes, "but why for four days particularly?"

"Because," was the reply, "my pension will be due then, and I want the money for my wife and children. Don't give me anything to make me sleep, for if I sleep I shall die."

On the third day after this, to the amazement of Stokes and others, the patient was still breathing. On the morning of the fourth day he was alive and conscious, and on entering the ward Stokes saw him holding in his hand the certificate which required signature. As the doctor drew near the dying man gasped:

"Sign, sign!"

The doctor quickly complied, and the man sank back exhausted and within a few minutes crossed his hands over his breast and said, "The Lord have mercy on my soul," and quietly breathed his last.

Where He Repaired It.

When illicit distilling was common in the highlands, there was an old man who went about the country repairing whisky pots.

The gauger met him one day and, surmising that he had been doing repairs at no great distance, asked what he would take to inform him (the gauger) where he repaired the last whisky pot.

"Och," said the old man, "she'll shust tak' hauf a croon."

"Done!" retorted the gauger. "Here is your money, but be careful to tell me correctly."

"Och, she'll no' tell the gentleman a lee."

Getting the money, the old man quietly remarked:

"I shust mended the last whisky pot where the hole was."—London Spare Moments.

Ingenious.

"My wife is the most ingenious woman who ever lived," said Kipper.

"I believe you," returned Nipper politely.

"But you don't know why you believe me," intimated Kipper.

"To tell the truth, I don't." replied Nipper, looking bored.

"Well, I'll tell you. We've been married 12 years and lived in the same house all the time, and this morning she found a new place in which to hide my slippers."—London Standard.

No Wonder Russia Is Ignorant!

Russia, with her population of 129,000,000, has only 743 newspapers, but little more than half the number published in the state of Pennsylvania, which is 1,430. Of the 743 there are 589 printed in Russian, 69 in Polish, 44 in German, 9 in French, 5 in Armenian and 2 in Hebrew. No English newspaper appears in the list.

The earliest known mention of the pianoforte was in a playbill dated May 16, 1767. The principal attraction was given thus: "Miss Buckler will sing a song from 'Judith,' accompanied by a new instrument called pianoforte."

About 1,500 tons of iron and brass wire are yearly manufactured in Britain into pins.

Can She Save Them?

Many a poor mother who feels that those she holds most precious are gradually slipping away from her over the terrible precipice of disease, would be thankful to know what Dr. Pierce's wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery" has done to restore thousands of weak and wasted children to complete rounded, rosy, healthy, activity and life.

"My little girl had a severe attack of fever," writes Mrs. Wm. S. Vollmer, of Concord, Cabarrus Co., N. C., in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "I had two physicians for her. She had a very bad cough, raised a great deal, and had wasted to a mere skeleton; only her feet and ankles were swollen. I knew what Dr. Pierce's medicines had done for us before so I commenced giving her 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a 'Pellet' occasionally.

"In a few days I noticed the fever was less; her cough gradually grew better; expectoration grew less; in a few days she sat up in bed and soon she could take a few steps. She kept on improving slowly and after a few weeks the swelling in feet and ankles went down, and she kept on step by step until she got well. This is more than two years ago.

"Last winter, Lula (my oldest daughter) had Grippe very badly. Her physician was uneasy; he told me to be very careful or she would have pneumonia. She was left with an awful cough. I gave her 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it cured her cough. I will be pleased to have my letter published. If persons wishing to know more about the great benefits we have received from using Dr. Pierce's medicines will write, enclosing stamp, I will gladly answer."

If mothers will only write to Dr. Pierce concerning the ailments of their family he will send them sound and valuable advice in a plain sealed envelope, and without any charge whatever. His remarkably wide experience has qualified him to deal with diseases which baffle the local practitioner.

The Index-Tribune

SONOMA, JULY 22, 1899.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

NEW VOLUME.

Twenty-one years ago to-day the SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE made its advent into the journalistic field. The paper was originally started by Ben Frank, an able and conscientious newspaper man. He was succeeded in turn up to 1884 by ten or twelve other newspaper men, whose careers in this town were very short—so brief indeed that the printer's devil when he closed the office of an evening never knew who his boss would be the following morning. In those days everybody apparently run the INDEX-TRIBUNE, if we except the nine months when it was owned and controlled by that brilliant journalist, Ed. Livernash, who was too strong a partisan to succeed in so contracted a newspaper field.

Succeeding Mr. Livernash in 1884, the present management the past fifteen years has made the INDEX-TRIBUNE one of the fixtures of Sonoma.

The weak and vacillating policy of allowing everybody in general and nobody in particular run the INDEX-TRIBUNE was immediately changed when we assumed its management. And that is the reason it has possessed itself of such thrift. The change in policy was this—from a paper run by the people to a paper run for the people. No faction has control of the INDEX-TRIBUNE'S columns nor has it ever had. The interests of the people have been consulted; the sentiments of the public voiced. This is why fifteen years striving have not been in vain; why fifteen years' efforts have been crowned with success. To day the SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE is one of the leading journals of the county. It has a paying circulation of 1000 and ranks among the foremost advertising mediums of the State.

No little boast is this for a town of Sonoma's size. Substantially our people show their appreciation and this willing, conscientious support together with able management and clean policy speaks for itself and will continue to speak throughout the columns of the INDEX-TRIBUNE in the years to come.

A PETITION, numerously signed has been sent to the Board of Supervisors, protesting against the erection of a slaughter house by H. Weyl off Broadway The maintenance of a slaughter house nuisance in that locality would menace the health of the High School students and make that part of town and valley uninhabitable. Broadway is one of the most prominent thoroughfares in the valley and the principal residence street of Sonoma and no one with the least regard for common decency would even think of converting any portion of that beautiful thoroughfare into the Butchertown of Sonoma.

The INDEX-TRIBUNE in adding its protest against the erection of the proposed slaughter house to that of the property-owners who will be affected by the contemplated nuisance does so without fear or favor. If Mr. Weyl wants to erect a slaughter house he should be compelled to select some isolated spot where it will not be a menace to the health of the people of that or any other section of this valley. It may be that he is above the law in this matter. But there is such a thing as public opinion stepping in and making itself felt in matters of this kind.

WE have no apologies to make for not giving all the credit of the success of the Fourth of July celebration at Glen Ellen to a single individual. Everybody in our sister town did their share in contributing toward that success and we again congratulate its people on the patriotic and enterprising spirit evinced on that occasion.

Call on Robinson & Farrell of Petaluma and see the finest line of carriages, farm and business wagons to be found north of San Francisco.

CASTORIA.

CARL GUNDLACH, the genial Vice-President and manager of the New York branch of the Gundlach-Bundschu Wine Company, must be a very attentive reader of our paper. He writes to his brother-in-law Mr. Carl Dresel of this city: "I see from the columns of the SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE that you have determined to christen the latest arrival in your family Carl Bunker Dresel, in loyal and patriotic commemoration of the day of his birth. For the kind remembrance of my own name in connection with my little nephew I feel highly flattered and I trust he will grow up to be a good American and will do honor to the other venerable name you have selected for him." Many of our readers will remember Mr. Carl Gundlach, when in his younger days he lived at Rhinefarm, as an amiable host and a most obliging, accomplished and fascinating young man. We are proud to know that he has not forgotten Sonoma and remains true to the INDEX-TRIBUNE.

They All Got In.

The following is the "true" story of the frog, the duck, the lamb, the skunk, the snake and the sardine, a part of which has been going the rounds of the press:

It appears that one idle day the frog, the duck, the lamb and the skunk started forth together to visit the show. Just what sort of show it was the chronicler didn't state. Anyway, it was something that the queerly assorted quartett was anxious to attend, and they hopped and waddled and gamboled and trotted toward the big canvas inclosure with delightful throbs of anticipation.

Finally they reached the door-tender, the frog leading the line.

Well, the frog had a greenback and passed right in.

The duck had a bill and followed the frog.

The lamb had four quarters and followed the frog and the duck.

But the unfortunate skunk was left on the outside. He had only a scent and that was bad. Naturally he turned away, feeling pretty blue. As he was slowly going back over the hill he saw a hoop snake rolling along at a lively rate toward the show. The skunk greeted him, but he did not stop.

"Don't interrupt me," he cried over his shoulder, "I've got to do a turn, and I'm a little late," and he rolled along.

At the top of the hill the skunk noticed another old friend approaching. It was the sardine.

"Hello!" cried the sardine. "What's the matter?"

So the skunk told him.

"I can guess how you feel about it," said the sardine sympathetically. "I belong to the smelt family myself. But, say, old fellow, you come right back and go in with me—I've got a box."

And the skunk and the sardine went back together.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An American Railroad in China.

Moneyed men from the United States have secured a franchise for building a railroad from Hong Kong to Han Kow, China, a distance of nearty 700 miles. It will run through a very fertile and rich section of country, and open up new opportunities for the people to prosper. While railroads are necessary to a nation's prosperity, health is still more necessary. A sick man can't make money if there are a thousand railroads. One of the reasons why America is so progressive is the fact that in every drug store is sold Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that celebrated tonic for the weak, stimulant for the kidneys, appetizer for the dyspeptic, purifier for the blood, and sedative for the nerves. It is taken with great success by thousands of men and women, who are run down, pale and weak. It increases the weight of thin people, and the gain is permanent and substantial.

The Latest Yarn.

A Pittsburg drummer tells this new yarn. I always carry a bottle of Kemp's Balsam in my grip. I take cold easily and a few doses of the Balsam always make me a well man. Everywhere I go I always speak a good word for Kemp. I take hold of my customers—I take old men and young men and tell them confidentially what I do when I take cold. At druggists, 25c. and 50c.

TWO HEARTS MADE ONE.

Pretty Wedding of Mr. E. G. Hughes and Miss Julia Meyer Last Sunday.

At the Methodist Church in this city last Sunday at high noon Rev. E. E. Thompson spoke the solemn words which united in wedlock Mr. E. G. Hughes of Alameda and Miss Julia Meyer, formerly of this place but now of San Francisco. The interior of the church was decorated with evergreens and choice cut flowers and a large congregation was present to witness the nuptial event. Miss Hannah Dorman, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Fred. Hughes, a brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony had been performed and the usual congratulations extended the bridal party and guests repaired to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Dorman, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was partaken of, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hughes left on the afternoon Southern Pacific train for San Francisco and other Bay cities where the honeymoon will be spent.

Mr. Hughes, who is a pattern maker in the Union Iron Works, will reside with his bride in Alameda.

A Minister's Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." This was hardly what he expected and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over, and found on the other side the matter intended for the reading.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

DREDGER ACCIDENT.

Peter Norrbom Knocked Almost Senseless by a Heavy Chain.

Peter Norrbom, well-known to the residents of this valley, and at the present time engaged as fireman on the Peabody dredger, had a narrow escape from being killed last Thursday morning. While at work on the dredger, which is engaged in building a new levee around Tubb's Island, he was struck a glancing blow by a heavy chain which became detached from a swinging boom overhead. The force of the blow knocked him five or six feet and rendered him all but unconscious. He received a deep gash over the left eye and was also badly bruised about the chest and one of his legs. He came to town a few hours after the accident and had his hurts, which were not serious, attended to by Dr. Walliser. He will be able to resume work on the dredger in a few days, thanks to surgical skill and the blow of the chain being a glancing one.

The City Fathers.

The City Trustees met in regular session last Wednesday evening, Trustees Duhring, Davis and Seipp being present and Trustees Harris and Hartin absent. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

No bills were presented.

The Special Committee on Pound Master, consisting of the President and Clerk, recommended that the Marshal be appointed to that office. The report was accepted. On motion of Trustee Seipp, seconded by Trustee Davis, City Marshal Albertson was duly elected to the position.

On motion of Trustee Davis, seconded by Trustee Seipp, the Clerk was instructed to inquire into the validity of the proposed amendment to the bicycle Ordinance and report to the Board.

The consideration of proposed Ordinance No. 63 was continued to the next meeting.

The Finance Committee was granted further time to investigate the Clerk's annual report.

The water proposition was called up by Trustee Davis, but owing to the absence of two members of the Board no action was taken in the matter.

The Board then adjourned.

JULIUS FOCHETTI'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Caught in the Machinery of a Gasoline Engine.

He is Painfully Injured but Miraculously Escapes Being Killed.

Julius Fochetti, the well-known machinist, had a close call last Wednesday morning between nine and ten o'clock. He was engaged in running the gasoline engine which furnishes the motive power for his machine shops. He had been in the engine room but a few minutes when he was seen by his brother, John Fochetti who was near at hand, to pitch headlong to the cement floor. He immediately stopped the machinery and went to the prostrate man's assistance and with the aid of another of the shop's employees dragged Mr. Fochetti out of the engine room. His face was covered with blood, and upon examining his injuries it was found that the blood flowed from a long gash extending along the left eye brow and the entire length of the nose which was laid wide open. There was also a contused wound on the forehead and a large bruise on the left cheek bone. Mr. Fochetti was carried to the Toscano Hotel and laid upon a cot and Dr. Davis summoned. An examination showed that no bones were broken and that the patient's wounds were confined to those about the head and face. The Dr. took nineteen stitches in the eyebrow and nose, a portion of the latter being held together by a mere shred of flesh. Mr. Fochetti was then taken to his home in a carriage and at latest accounts was getting along nicely and will shortly be able to attend to business.

Just how the accident occurred Mr. Fochetti could not state. It is presumed, however, that his leather apron became entangled in the fly wheel of the engine and he was thrown off his feet. His face evidently came in contact with the rapidly-revolving wheel, the sharp edge of which no doubt inflicted the terrible cut on his face. The contused wounds on the cheek and forehead were made by striking the hard cement floor.

There will be "Warm Coon a Prancing" at the Lady Minstrels to-night at Union Hall. Don't forget it. Doors open at 7:30. Performance at 8:30 sharp.

Odd Fellows Installation and Banquet.

District Deputy Grand Master Ferguson, representing District No. 72, installed the following officers of Sonoma Lodge, No. 28, I. O. O. F., on Saturday evening, July 8th.

N. G., Jos. B. Small; V. G., J. G. Marcy; Recorder and Financial Secretary, Jas. H. Albertson; Treasurer, Fred. Batto; Trustee, J. D. Wagnon. Appointed officers: W., G. H. Cornelius; J. S. G., H. Castagnacio; Conductor, J. M. Cheney; R. S. to N. G., J. D. Wagnon; L. S. to N. G., Otto Olsen; R. and L. S. to V. G., J. R. Dyer and Chas. Wilson.

After the installation the Brothers repaired to an adjoining room where an oyster supper, prepared by the Sisters of Rebekah Degree Lodge, awaited them. The Brothers did ample justice to the many good things set before them by the ladies, and amid toasts and speech-making the time was very pleasantly spent until midnight.

The juvenile song and dance artists to appear to-night at the Sonoma Lady Minstrels are well worth seeing. They will undoubtedly capture the hearts of the audience.

Mrs. Robt. Hill Meets With an Accident.

Mrs. Robt. P. Hill of Eldridge, while driving across the bridge at Chauvet's crossing last Wednesday, was thrown out of her buggy and badly shaken up and bruised. Dr. Davis attended to Mrs. Hill's injuries which are not serious. The accident was caused by a kicking horse.

Swiss National Club Decide to Celebrate in Sonoma.

Victor Sartori to be President of the Day and Jacob Almstelden Grand Marshal.

At a meeting of the Sonoma Swiss National Club, held in the Pavilion last Sunday, it was unanimously decided to celebrate the 608th anniversary of the independence of Switzerland in Sonoma on September 17th.

Victor Sartori was selected as President of the Day and Jacob Almstelden was chosen Grand Marshal.

The following committee was selected to make the necessary arrangements for the celebration: G. Pedrori, S. C. Codini, Victor Sartori, Anton Kiser, Arnold Riebli, V. Bulotti, Jos. Riebli, Julius Fochetti, L. Rigusci and Albert Kiser.

The committee has not as yet selected a site for holding the exercises but they will be held either in the City Pavilion or some other place accessible to town. It is the intention of our Swiss residents to make this celebration the biggest affair of the kind ever held in this county.

Before adjourning the club elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing term: Jos. Keechler, President; Anton Fonz, Vice-President; Theo. Riebli, Secretary; Peter Yenni, Treasurer.

SONOMA BOYS AGAIN VICTORIOUS.

Bert Jones and Geo. Laux Winners of the Bicycle Races.

Quite a crowd of spectators turned out last Sunday afternoon to witness the bicycle races on Broadway between the Schellville and Sonoma boys. The course over which the races were reeled off is a level quarter-mile stretch between the Dewey residence and Willow cottage. The boys were attired in regular riding uniforms and the time made was very fast. Following was the program of events:

First Race—One-fourth mile, best two in three heats, between Bert Jones and Ed. Kelso. Jones, who is a crack-a-jack cyclist, won the race in two straight heats. Time 25 seconds.

Second Race—Same as above, contestants Dick Watt and Jos. Kiser. Watt won the race. Time 30 seconds.

Third Race—One-quarter mile dash, between Dick Watt and Bert Jones, winners of the first and second races. Here Jones again showed his speed and proved to be too much for his opponent, Mr. Watt, by crossing the string first. Time 25 seconds.

Fourth Race—One quarter mile dash, between Ed. Kelso and Jos. Kiser, lossers of the first and second races. Kelso won. Time 28 seconds.

Fifth Race—One-fourth mile dash, between Morris and Laux. Laux came in first. Time 30 seconds.

Narrowly Escaped Drowning.

On Wednesday last while a lady guest at the Agua Caliente Springs Hotel was bathing in the large swimming tank on the place she got into deep water and sank to the bottom of the tank in about seven feet of water. A vigilant attendant, whose duty it is to look after the safety of the bathers, was on hand and before the on-lookers could realize it he had jumped into the tank and rescued the drowning woman, who was more badly scared than hurt. So carefully are these swimming baths guarded that it is impossible for an accident to occur to the bathers. One may be taken with cramps or through carelessness get beyond his or her depth but an attendant is always on hand to fish the bather out.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

H. H. GRANICE, Proprietor.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, JULY 22, 1899.

Notice of Business Change.

The old saying that "the unlooked-for always happens" may be true in the present instance. The Sonoma News is no more! Having sold the paper and its good will to Mr. Granice, the business and subscription books pass into his hands. Those who are in arrears for their paper will please pay Mr. Granice and those who have paid in advance will receive the INDEX-TRIBUNE to full extent of their subscriptions.

There are three reasons I might give for making this change. It is well known that I did not buy the News with the intention of running it myself. A person usually sells a commercial commodity when the price asked is accepted. The third reason is the more potent one—our patronizing territory is too limited to properly support two weekly newspapers.

But we do need and must have for the weal of the commonwealth one good, wide-awake paper, which shall be alive to the best interests of our people, and such a paper Mr. Granice will be able to furnish us providing he has the good will and support his paper merits. So we sincerely hope all our subscribers and patrons will lend a hand.

With a thank you to our friends and wishes for the success of the INDEX-TRIBUNE we break our quill.

E. E. THOMPSON.

HE FACED GREAT DANGER.

But, Not Knowing It, He Escaped Being Considered Brave.

"I noticed a couple of reminiscences as to my old branch of service," said an ex-naval official to the writer, "which reminded me of an incident in my own career. I was an assistant engineer on a cruiser bound from Norfolk to South American ports, and our ship was telling off 14 or 15 knots an hour one day, when a crank pin came out, and the next instant the crank was thrashing around in a most recklessly unsystematic fashion. Everybody in the engine room—and there were some men of considerable rank there just then, as it happened—made a dash for the deck. Meanwhile I quietly took four or five steps and shut off the steam. Of course the engines stopped, and then followed the delay caused by making the necessary repairs.

"It didn't occur to me that I had performed any act of an especial character until the chief engineer informed me that I was a confounded fool. 'Don't you know your place under such circumstances, sir?' he asked, and when I answered that I thought I had taken my proper position he continued: "No, sir; your duty was to make your way as soon as possible to the deck. With that piece of steel whirling and crashing about it was one chance in a thousand that a single soul would escape an instantaneous cooking, because if that thing had carried away the steam connections your life would have ended right then.'

"'Well, I took the chance,' I answered.

"'Yes, sir, you did, but you didn't know it, therefore it is not at all to your credit,' was the chief's answer, and it was so absolutely true that I couldn't for the life of me make any reply."—Detroit Free Press.

English Penny Novels.

Penny novelettes differ from one another in externals rather than in internals. The get up of the better sort is neat and attractive. The type is clear, and the covers might even be called "artistic" in the catholic sense of the term. The inferior kinds are indifferently printed "on gray paper with blunt type," and there are many degrees of excellence between the two extremes. All except one have illustrations ranging from the rudest of woodcuts to the smudgiest of "process" plates. Of course the artist selects the most sensational incidents for his pencil to adorn. The stabbing of the heroine's father by the villain disguised as the hero, the kidnaping of the heroine by Black Tom and his gang of gypsies at the instigation of her jealous rival, the horsewhipping of the villain by the hero in "faultless" evening dress—these and their like naturally present themselves as thoroughly suitable and congenial subjects.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Malicious Interference.

"I'll get even with that printer," said the editor of the Plunkville Bugle. "If it takes me the rest of my life."

"What printer?" asked his friend.

"That tramp I took on while my wife was visiting her mother. I got a $10 write up out of old Hiker, who is laying his pipes for the senatorship, and I said that some day his little son would make as big a mark as his father, and that villain fixed it that the young 'un would 'be' as big a mark, etc."—Indianapolis Journal.

OVER THE FERRY.

It was a beautiful frosty morning in December. A lady wearing a pink complexion and a green riding habit was in her saddle. Captain Miller rode beside her. They were hurrying to catch the 11:15 from Haybridge for Aldershot.

"We have only one chance," he cried, "Shepperton ferry! We have only 20 minutes."

"Then we shan't do it!" she exclaimed almost fiercely, raising herself in her saddle. "There is the ferry."

Captain Miller leaped from his saddle and taking the horses' heads led them on to the great unwieldy ferryboat as a butcher's cart came off it.

"Quick over!" he shouted to the ferryman. "We want to catch the 11:15 from Haybridge."

"What's the time now, sir?"

"Nearly 11."

The ferryman looked across the river. "Lor', sir, you're about as likely to catch that train as I am to become the champion sculler next regatta."

The lady produced her smiles and a green purse lined with red leather and white satin. Out of this came half a sovereign, which she slipped into the ferryman's receptive fingers.

"These are a bit oncommon, lady," said the ferryman, slipping the gold into his pocket. "Bill, wake up at your end. We've got to make this 'ere old boat move along."

And they did too.

The horses tossed their heads in the air and rolled their eyes, nervously champing their bits and shaking their bridles. Captain Miller, holding both reins in one hand, looked again at his watch.

"Shall we do it?" she asked anxiously.

He did not answer in words, but the expression on his face plainly said "No."

"Bet you we shall!" cried the lady brightly.

"What will you bet?"

Her voice dropped to a low tone as she answered, but low though her voice was she spoke with the utmost intensity.

"What will I bet? My hand and my heart and my life."

"If that be the stake," said Captain Miller, "we'll catch the train."

"If we don't, I'll never speak to you again," she said, looking at the jeweled watch upon her wrist. "Help me up."

He bent down, and treading on his palm she jumped lightly into her saddle. The ferryboat grated on the shore. They touched their horses on the flanks and were off.

* * * * * * *

The December days went by, the crisp winter weather passed, and there came the lovely May time. Again the old ferryboat crossed the river to bring over a carriage with a pair of bays.

The carriage was empty except for the two servants who were on the box. When it was ferried over, the coachman took up his reins, and threading his way through the old boats and punts which lay along the side of the ferry road he drove off.

"D'ye know whose carriage that was, Mr. Wheal?" said one the ferrymen to the other.

"That's Captain Miller's carriage, him that lives up at Littleton, the house what has a clock. He got married last week. Speck he'll come down 'ere this summer."

"Had any more thick uns lately, Mr. Wheal?"

"No, Bill, I ain't. They're not overplentiful. She was one of the right sort, she was. I wonder if she caught that train? Did ye hear wot her bet was?"

"No."

"Well, she bet her 'art and 'er 'and."

"Lor'!"

"Gentle folks 'as funny ways, Bill," said the ferryman reflectively.

* * * * * * *

The spring went and the summer came. One of our English summers it happened to be, with cold winds and gray skies. Wheal was sculling over in the small ferryboat, as his custom was. He came from the Haybridge side with two passengers as his freight.

They were ladies. Stepping out of the boat on the Shepperton side, they accosted another, who was waiting to be ferried over.

"Good morning, Mrs. Miller," they said, nodding and smiling hurriedly from their umbrellas. Then they passed on under the poplars.

Wheal looked up quickly from his boat, identifying Mrs. Miller in his mind's eye.

The lady got in and sat down, huddling herself under a small fur cape.

When the ferryman had brought his boat to the steps, the lady, producing her green purse, opened it. It was lined with red morocco and white satin. The ferryman, smiling with agreeable recollections, was emboldened to speak.

"You caught that train, lady, last December?"

"Yes," she said curtly. Then she paid him his penny.

"Bill," said the ferryman to his mate as he stood afterward in the shed watching the beautiful rain, "you know that lady that we ferried over in the winter—her with Captain Miller and the 'orses?"

"Her that wanted to ketch a train?"

"That's her. Well, she did ketch her train, an she ketched him, too, an he ketched her, and, in my opinion, he's ketched a Tartar."

"How d'ye know all that, Mr. Wheal?"

"How do I know it? Why, she's Mrs. Miller now, cos that's what I heard them two ladies a-callin 'er. An the stake was 'er 'art an 'er 'and—if she ketched the train. If, mind yer—if. Well, she's Mrs. Miller, an so she did ketch it, an somehow I think now she would rather she'd lorst it."

"Why do you think that, Mr. Wheal?"

"Why! Well, she had a pretty smile in the winter time, and her face was a pretty pink—a lovely pink it was, but it's 'er nose as is pink now. Then she give us 'alf a golden jemmy. Well, this is what she give me now."

On Wheal's bread, toil worn palm lay a penny. He held it out and looked as it with varying expressions, scorn and reproach and disgust. Then he looked at it once more and again held it out at arm's length, with an expression now of sorrow.

"There! That's wot she give me. Lor, now! I ask you, Bill, is marriage a failure?"

"It allus is," said Bill, buttoning up his coat and retreating into the shed.

But Bill was a misanthrope w[illegible] it was wet in summer time. It ha[illegible] colder, the drizzle had changed to [illegible] and now it was beginning to hail.—

A Beautiful Description.

In winter nature ceases from her labors and prepares for the great change. The wind sweeps through the great forest with a sound like the blast of a trumpet. The dry leaves whirl in eddies through the air. A fretwork of heavy frost covers the plain. The stagnant water in the pools and ditches is frozen into fantastic figures. In the low hanging clouds the sharp air, like a busy shuttle, weaves her shroud of snow. There is a melancholy and continual roar in the tops of the tall pines like the roar of a cataract. It is the funeral anthem of the dying year.—Longfellow.
